Working with their clients to develop custom design work plans, Merrick Architecture was looking for the same level of personalized service from their IT company. With two office locations creating an important centralization issue, Merrick Architecture consulted with Compunet InfoTech to provide them with the customized services and reliable systems that they needed to move forward.

When a company begins expanding, or makes the decision to move, they face significant information technology and data communication challenges if their provider is not prepared for the newly required services.

The Situation: a growing company with the need for robust server and network infrastructure solutions

Merrick Architecture found itself facing challenges regarding a centralization issue. A more optimized solution was needed for server and network infrastructure hardware and software, with two office locations requiring a central data and telephone management.

Marjan Salmanian of Merrick Architecture explains how crucial technology is to the company, saying, "We rely on technology to support the architectural design process, document, and to communicate with our clients and consultants."

With a 15 year business relationship, Merrick Architecture approached Compunet InfoTech, who had proven their ability to provide top-notch on-site/network support and services.

Salmanian comments, "Compunet InfoTech's IT support is always professional with quick response. Merrick Architecture relocated three times in the past 10 years, and Compunet InfoTech has been there every time to help minimize system downtime."
